What is Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI)?

Doctors use Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) to find diseases or abnormalities in the body without using X-rays. MRI uses a safe magnetic field and radio waves to create detailed images of the body. MRI is used to study joints in all parts of the body. Abnormalities of the spine, nerves and vertebral discs, or sports-related injuries such as torn ligaments and fractures, can be identified on MRI scans.

MRI Patient Checklist

Prior to your exam, review the following checklist.

- » Bring any previous X-rays taken at another center to the exam.
- » Continue to take any medication you normally take.
- » You CANNOT have an MRI scan if you have:
  - Certain cerebral aneurysm clips
  - Certain heart valves
  - Cochlear implants
  - Metal filings in the eye
  - Certain pacemakers or defibrillators
- » You will be asked questions prior to your exam, and preliminary X-rays may be taken.
- » If you may be claustrophobic, ask your doctor to prescribe medication prior to the exam. If you do receive medication, bring someone with you to drive you home.

MRIs can also be used for imaging the heart, abdomen, pelvis and breast and are help doctors to diagnose disease. Veins and arteries also can be seen using magnetic resonance angiographic (MRA).

For patients who are anxious or claustrophobic, our wide-bore MRI scanner allows for a more comfortable and open MRI experience. The wide-bore scanner is also great for larger patients allowing more room to relax.

We also perform Breast MRI and MRI-Guided Breast Biopsy. Breast MRI is a scan used for detecting and staging breast cancer and other breast abnormalities.

What to Expect During the MRI Exam

During the MRI scan, you lie on a cushioned table that moves into the scanner. For certain studies, an injected contrast agent may be used. MRI contrast agents rarely cause allergic reactions.

Tell your doctor if you are allergic to any medicine (prescription or nonprescription), are pregnant, breastfeeding, or have any other medical conditions.

The technologist stays in contact with you throughout the exam. When the scan begins, you will hear a muffled sound for several minutes. Lie as still as possible, as any movement during this time can distort the image. The MRI scan generally takes 20 – 60 minutes, depending upon what your doctor has ordered.

After Your Exam

After your exam is complete, the radiologist will review the scans and forward results to your doctor within 24 hours. Your doctor will review the results and then call you to share the results with you.

MRI Arthrography

MRI arthrography (MRA) is used to look at disease in and around the joints (for example the shoulder, wrist or hip).

A contrast solution is injected into the joint under fluoroscopic (X-ray) guidance. The injection of contrast takes between 5-10 minutes.

After the contrast is injected, you will have an MRI. The contrast allows the radiologist to see the joints better during your MRI. You will need to lie still during this exam.

After your exam, the radiologist will share the results of the exam with your doctor (see "After your Exam").
